

You want the BEST? You've found him!

Reviewed by Jack Zibert from Chicago on Aug 29, 2007

I am a veteran 40x marathon runner. Over the course of running, I've nursed plenty of injuries and sought out massage regularly over the past 15 years to deal with the stresses of training, injuries, as well as just relaxing. I'm guessing I may have had 25-30 or so massage therapists in my life. I can say without qualification that Noel is one of the best or perhaps the best massage therapist I've worked with, aside from Jason Anderson who himself is no longer practicing in the field.

Noel is obviously experienced and trained in many forms of massage, knows what he's doing and how to do it. He tailors a massage by zeroing in on particular stressed areas, and not just gives a general "cookie cutter" massage that's the same for everyone. It's clear he has a unique appreciation for the need of the person for that day or condition, as each of the 9 -10 massages I have gotten from him so far have been very responsive to the areas that needed the most work.

Thanks to Noel, I have been able to clear up a painful nagging tennis elbow problem as well as a shoulder injury from overeager lifting in a workout. As if this weren't enough, add to his therapeutic talent a warm, caring, humorous personality with an unassuming charming manner. I don't regularly sing people's praises and I'm aware that every therapist/doctor is not perfect for everyone. But, believe me, you will look far and wide before meeting a therapist with his talent. As strange as it may sound, finding his skills and talent was worth the injury!